I recently went to an anniversary dinner with a couple of other people. The environment is good, low-key old school steakhouse. Employees are always pleasant and suitable for attention. (I.e., always... Available, but not intrusive or annoying.) good for me. It's not cheap, but it's sensible for a great New York-style steakhouse. My wife had a tartare ton that she loved so much, and Zoopa di Psas as dinner (also available as an anerated) that she really liked. i had soup that was good. (Guess how hard it is to find French soup? And I went vege salad probably more than I needed as it was great (and good). The couple's wife we were with had a fish she liked so much, and myself and another husband ordered the rare average Porterhouse. I crossed my fingers, as the last few Porterhouses I had (not here) were the size of despair, quality. When I served, I used them quickly. i couldnt finish it. Coffee, dessert was good. They have a good cart with liqueurs, etc. I had Brilett, a delicious pair brandy I only saw here. Great meal on a special day. More
